1.　Caffe is a deep learning framework made with expression, speed, and modularity in mind. It is developed by Berkeley AI Research (BAIR) and by community contributors. Yangqing Jia created the project during his PhD at UC Berkeley. Caffe is released under the BSD 2-Clause license.

2.　Tensorflow, developed and maintained by Google's AI team, has multiple projects including TensorFlow Hub, TensorFlow Lite, TensorFlow Research Cloud and various Application Programming Interface (APIS) . As of November 9,2015, TensorFlow is open source under the Apache 2.0 open source license.

3.Keras'main developer is Google Engineer Fran Ois Chollet, and its GITHUB project page includes six major maintainers and more than 800 direct contributors. Keras, after its official release, is open source under an MIT license, with the exception of some pre-compiled models.

4.Keras is primarily developed by Google Engineer Fran Ois Chollet, and its GITHUB project PyTorch is an open source Python package released under an improved Berkeley Software Distribution license. PYTORCH is owned by Facebook, IDIAP Research Institute, New York University NYU and NEC Labs America. Although Python is the preferred language for data science, PyTorch is a relatively new area of deep learning. The page contains six primary maintainers and more than 800 direct contributors. Keras, after its official release, is open source under an MIT license, with the exception of some pre-compiled Models.
